WHAT IS A SPEECH-LANGUAGE PATHOLOGIST (SLP)?

The Gift of Speech has developed a dynamic team of licensed speech-language pathologists (SLP) and speech-language pathology assistants (SLPA) to serve clients. An SLP is a licensed health care professional specializing in diagnosing and treating speech and language disabilities. SLPs screen, identify, assess, refer, and provide treatment to persons with (or at risk for) speech, voice, language, communication, swallowing and other speech/language related disabilities.

HOW DOES AN SLP HELP CORRECT SPEECH DISABILITIES?

All Speech-Language Pathologists at The Gift of Speech are trained therapists specializing in evaluating speech-language disabilities. Our therapists work with clients to diagnose disabilities and create/carry out treatment plans. Treatment plans are determined by the specific disability and range from correcting or modifying a speech/language disorder to developing functional communication systems.

WHEN SHOULD I CONTACT AN SLP?

Anyone at any age can have a speech or language problem. The earlier the problem is diagnosed and therapy is begun, the better the chances of successful treatment. Referrals can be made by the family, physicians or anyone concerned about an individual's communication development.

WHY SHOULD I CONTACT THE GIFT OF SPEECH?

Communicating clearly is an essential life skill. Speech and language disabilities can lead to life-long struggles.

- Learning is more difficult and frustrating. Scholastic and professional performance can suffer as a result.
- People who have trouble communicating clearly, may: develop poor social skills; have trouble relating to others; and, their relationships may suffer. This can result in depression and isolation.
- Opportunities are limited for people with poor communication skills. They may have trouble leading independent, satisfying lives.
